COBIT® NIST Cybersecurity Framework

Limited capacity: only 50 seats available!

Prerequisites: Basic knowledge of COBIT and security concepts

This course is focused on the Cybersecurity Framework (CSF), its goals, the implementation steps, and the ability to apply this information. The course and exam are for individuals who have a basic understanding of both COBIT 5 and security concepts, and who are involved in improving the cybersecurity program for their enterprises.

After completing this workshop, you will be able to:

- Understand the goals of the CSF
- Know and discuss the content of the CSF and what it means to align to it
- Understand each of the seven CSF implementation steps
- Be able to apply and evaluate the implementation steps using COBIT 5

ERM Can Now Work! Putting the Updated COSO ERM Framework and ISO 31000 Standards Into Practice

Limited capacity: only 50 seats available!

This workshop will use the new COSO ERM Framework, with reference to ISO 31000, to discuss how we should consider risk and what it means to properly manage risk in an organization. Those responsible for facilitating risk management in their organization, or auditing a risk management activity, will find this workshop to be useful in providing a firm understanding of how risk management should be defined, structured, and executed in organizations. In addition, as all auditors use risk as the foundation for audit planning, execution, and reporting, this workshop will provide insight on how an auditor's view of risk should be upgraded to incorporate the latest thinking embodied in these two updated projects. The workshop will use a combination of theory and small group discussion to unpack the theory into easily understandable parts, and case studies to cover these topics.

Which Leadership Quality Matters Most...With Clients and Employees

Leaders who build trust excel at our two most important goals: create respected relationships with stakeholders and produce more work from their teams. Which trust skills matter most? Our studies say this:

1. Be transparent...show vulnerability by saying “I don’t know,” take risks to do the right things, be consistent up and down the organization chart
2. Apologize when you should...take responsibility for all you do right and wrong, commit to improving in the future
3. Hold others accountable...whether stakeholders or those on your team, express clear expectations, recognize those who do well, and follow up with those who miss; keep performance discussions confidential

These same trust-building skills apply to our stakeholders, too, as small but strong indicators go a long way to believing in our competence and integrity. And those two words...competence and integrity...are in the first sentence of any auditor’s job description.
