HOW DOES ISACA BENEFIT SOMEONE NEW TO THE TECH FIELD?

During ISACA’s 50th anniversary year, members offer advice on how ISACA can help new members further their career goals and development in assurance, risk, governance or security professions.

“I would recommend anyone to pursue any of ISACA’s certifications to be recognized by peers, clients and organizations as a world-class professional with vision and a subject matter expert of repute.”

Ganiyu Oladimeji, MCPN, IADT, CSXF, MBA, CRISC, CISM, CISA
Nigeria

“ISACA is like a gym – you will not get fit if you just go and stand in front of the mirror. You have to exercise. Don’t just go to the events, stand there and get all the benefits. You have to go as much as you can, you have to talk to people, present in conferences, study, and pay attention – in other words, work out. Like in the gym, you will gain all the benefits!”

Arnulfo “The AudiTHOR” Espinosa, CISA, CISM, CRISC, CSXF

“You have a chance to be associated with a vibrant group of technology professionals around the world, and share in and benefit from the continuous knowledge exchange.”

Nanda Dulal Kundu, CISA,DCM,CAIIB,ISO-27001
IT/Cyber security consultant
India

“ISACA offers you the opportunity to become personally involved and develop your leadership skills as a volunteer, so take advantage of that, as well as the many educational and networking opportunities.”

Karen Norton, CISA, CRMA, CPA
VP, IT Risk Manager
United States

“ISACA sets the standards for the profession and promotes certifications that are recognized through the auditing, governance, risk and security communities. ISACA is also the place to meet colleagues in your profession. This is where it happens, and it is a place to share with others what you have learned, too.”

Stephen J. Jue, CISA
Assistant Director, Field Office Manager, Seattle, USGAO (ret.)
United States
